

For Immediate Release

Ian Penny joins MLBPA Staff

New York, NY, Monday, September 13, 2010 ... Major League Baseball Players Association Executive Director Michael Weiner today announced that Ian Penny has been hired by the MLBPA as a senior labor attorney.

Ian, 46, joins the MLBPA after spending the previous 10 years with the National Hockey League Players Association, where he most recently served as interim Executive Director. Prior to joining the NHLPA, Ian worked with the National Labor Relations Board from 1988-2000.

"I've known Ian for more than 15 years, and have worked closely with him when he was with the National Labor Relations Board and the National Hockey League Players Association. The players are fortunate that we're able to add someone of such high caliber to the staff as we prepare for the next round of collective bargaining," said Weiner.

A graduate of New York University Law School (1988), Ian and his wife, Lauri, have two children.

- end -

Media Contact: Greg Bouris, MLBPA Director of Communications, 212/826-0808